Land Quality – The Essential Update 2010

With the new government pledging a radical overhaul of the planning system, plans to review the statutory guidance for Part 2A underfoot, and budgets being cut across the board, it's unsurprising that practitioners report a difficulty keeping up to date with developments pertinent to their profession.

In this complex and varied sector, it's almost impossible for any one practitioner to remain at the forefront of technical and policy knowledge yet the demands of jobs require that we do so. Environmental Protection UK's Land Quality Autumn Update will ensure you make the most of time and cost limitations by pulling together the key changes in the context of what they mean to your profession.

Key sessions aim to include:

- What does the change in government mean to land quality management
- The planning regime – what has changed and what this means to you
- Part 2A – an update on the statutory guidance review
- Developments in Risk Assessment
- Funding matters
- Skills, Competency and Accreditation initiatives – the latest
- Climate change and land quality – why it matters
- An update from Europe – what can we learn and what can we expect

Providing access to expert speakers, industry leaders and your peers through informative presentations and detailed case studies, this event will allow you to return to your desk with confidence that you are informed and up to date with relevant developments. With unrivalled opportunities to pose questions to the experts and network with your peers, discussion will be central to the event, ensuring an open and dynamic learning environment.

Land Quality Update is aimed at

- Contaminated land specialists in local authorities
- Land quality consultants
- Environmental Health Managers
- Planners
- Policy makers
